CORRESPONDENT KINCAID'S TRIAL. It is Postponed Until the Third Monday

in March.
The trial of Charles S. Kineaid for the aurder of ex-Representative Taulbee at he Capitol on February 28, 1800, had been et for one week from to-day, January 26, set for one week from to-day, January 20, but, as has generally been expected, a motion for continuance was made this moraing, and the trial continued until March 16, next, by order of Justice Hagner.

Shortly after the opening of the Criminal Court to-day Senator Voorhees, Representative Grosvenor, Judge Wilson and C. Maurice Smith, the distinguished counsel for Kineaid, appeared. District Attorney Hoge and his assistant, Mr. Clagett, represented the Government.

Senator Voorhees stated that the defense had given notice to the District Attorney that a motion for continuance would be made on the ground that it would be impossible for Mr. Grosvenor and himself to appear for Kineaid, if the trial was commenced next week. It would be impossible, the Senator said, for either General Grosvenor or himself to appear during the present session of Congress, on account of the shape which matters had assumed in that body. He was not prepared to argue the proposition that might be made that Congresson gress, on account of the shape which matters had assumed in that body. He was not prepared to argue the proposition that might be made, that Congressmen should not engage in such cases, but would ask the Court to continue the trial to some date after the 4th of March.

District-Attorney Hoge said that the case was set for January 26, because many important witnesses in the case were employed in the Senate and House and they could be best secured while Congress was in session. He was not ready to consent to a continuance, but opposed it with great hesitancy, because he wished to accommodate the counsel who were in public positions. He would therefore propose, if the case was continued at all, it should be assigned to a date shortly after the adjournment of Congress.

Representative Gresvener also spoke of the situation in which Senator Voorhees and himself were placed. He referred to the objection that might be made that men in public places should not engage in other business, when Judge Wilson interrupted him, saying: "Not while the Government pays you the salaries it does now."

now."

General Grosvenor said that it was necessary to make preparations in Kentucky for the trial, and therefore did not wish it to be assigned to immediately after March 4.

wish it to be assigned to immediately after March 4.

Judge Hoge called attention to the fact that Messrs. Wilson and Smith, who were members of the local bar, could make all the necessary preparations, and it would only be required for the other counsel to be present at the trial.

Judge Jeremiah Wilson spoke of the pitiable condition of Kincaid's health. Ever since he had been admitted to bail he had been at his home in Kentaicky. Mr. Smith also spoke of Kincaid's physical condition. He said that it would be impossible for Kincaid to appear for trial next week, as the hardships of such a trial would place his life in Jeopardy. It was almost impossible for counsel now to awake Kincaid to the fact that he was about to be tried for murder, or for the counsel to make connection with him.

Judge Hege remarked that he had information to the effect that the defendant's health had been improved since the admission to bail, and he was traveling over the State of Kentucky.

Mr. Smith answered that Mr. Kincaid's health was somewhat improved, and traveling added to this improvent, which postponed.

Justice Hagner decided that as the pub-lic duties of Senator Voorhees and Representative Grosvenor were imperative, and would prevent their appearance at the tria if held next week, he would postpone the if held next week, he would postpone the trial to a date suitable to both prosecution and defense.

After some discussion Monday, March 16, was settled upon, and the Court post-poned the trial to that day. Judge Wit-son stated that there were very few wit-nesses to be examined and the trial would undoubtedly be finished in less than a week.

HARRISON'S HARD HEART HE TURNS A DEAF EAR TO THE STORY

OF THE SUFFERING

Of a Soldier's Widow and Inquires Why He is Annoyed With Such a "Trivial Story"-Neither a Helping Hand Extended Nor a Word of Sympathy Vonchsafed. Among the wretchedly destitute women of the gay, rich capital is a Mrs. Lilla Parker, who lives in a scantily furnished room in a boarding-house on E street northwest, between Tenth and Eleventh streets. Mrs. Parker has enjoyed life in a far different sphere, and at one time was the loving wife of a surgeon in the Union army during the war, a Republican, and a member of the G. A. R. Mrs. Parker ame to this city from Atlanta, Ga., with the hope of securing some employment under Government that would enable her to support herself in her widowhood.

to support herself in her widowhood.

After a senson of vain efforts to obtain recognition, and when her means had become exhausted, her distressed condition became known to Colonel I. W. Avery, the private secretary of Senator Brown, who listened patiently to her story of destitution, and then resolved to relieve her if possible. Armed with letters of introduction from Senators Brown and Colquitt, the Colonel proceeded to the White House, secured an audience with the House, secured an audience with the President and unfolded to the Executive ears the story of Mrs. Parker's woes. Here is Colonel Avery's own story of his visit to the White House in his own cars the story of Mrs. Parker's woes.

Here is Colonel Avery's own story of his visit to the White House in his own language:

"The President," said he, "received me coldly and it seemed to me that the sad story I brought to his attention made no appreciable impression on his sympathy.

"My suspicions were soon realized, for when I had finished the President, waving his hand impatiently, inquired why I had come to him with this trivial story of distress when his mind was burdened and time occupied with affairs of so much greater moment. I assured his Excellency that as the President of all the people, rich and poor, I felt that I had the right to appeal to him, and I had not hesitated to exercise the right.

"Upon this he referred me to Mr. Windom, to whom I immediately went, only to find myself referred to the Assistant Secretary, then to the Chief Clerk, and, finally, to the person in charge of the charwomen. When I had reached this humble sphere I had hopes that my mission would not be without good results, but I was doomed to disappointment.

"Drawing from his desk a long list of applications, this official bade me glance over the names, and then he volunteered the information that the hundreds of names on the list represented as many soldiers' widows, every one of whom was entitled to preferment before Mrs. Parker could be cared for.

"I must confess my grievous disappointment," remarked Mr. Avery," at the roor success of my mission in behalf of the destitute lady, but grievous as this is, it does not equal my indignation at the manner of President Harrison and his apparent lack of sympathy for the widow of a brother soldier. If it had been Lincoln or Grant I think I should have had at least a kind word and an expression of approval for the interest I felt in the case."

Two Babes Locked in a Room for Two Days and a Half Rescued Alive. CINCINNATI, Jan. 19.—Last Thursday two tittle tots—Rachel Frisch, 4 years old, and Charley Phillips, 3 years old—toddled away together from their homes on College street. Their distracted parents sought them day and night in vain ever since. Yesterday strong arms bore the little ones back more dead than alive to their halfcrazed parents. The children are too young to speak for themselves, and there is no one else to tell their story. They were seen together on Sixth street near midnight last Wednesday.

They were found locked up together in the second story of Hart's retail shoe store, 122 West Sixth street, within two blocks of their home. The entrance to their prison was by a stairway from an alley, and the door that shut them in was fastened with a night-lock. A boy happened to see their tearful fnees at a window about noon, and he gave the first alarm.

dow about noon, and he gave the first alarm.

The first cry of both the little ones when their prison door was broken open was, "Water, water." They were found lying face downwarsi on the floor, their arms and feet spread out, and they were crying. They had been shut up alone in the cold sixty hours without food or water. They are now under the care of physicians, and fear is felt that their illness may be very serious. They said a ness may be very serious. They said a man took them to the room.

last sad rites, Mrs. J. C. Banccott and her daughter having returned from the South yesterday.

Almost in the center of the bustling manufacturing city of Worcester will the remains of George Bancroft be laid. The rural cemetery where the Bancroft burial place is located, has been hidden on all sides by the city which has grown up during the bistorian's life time. Big factories, and the immense Moen Iron Works are adjacent, and the quiet, beautiful cemetery is shut in by a high fence over which the echoes of the busy world beyond penetrate into its silence. Few of the grand old oaks which hang over the mounds are older than the historian himself. A number of Massachusetts' sons sleep in the cemetery. The former residence of Rev. Dr. Bancroft is still on one of the quiet streets in the older portion of the city.

A large number of distinguished persons have signified their intention to be present at the funeral services. The pall-bearers, so far selected, are Chief Justice Fuller, Justices Field and Blatchford, Senator Evaris, Mr. Bayard, Admiral Rodgers, George William Curtis, Mr. John A. King, Mr. Spofford and Professor S. P. Langley.

Secretary Tracy late this afternoon issued the following order:

"It is with deep regret that the Secretary of the Navy announces to the Navy and the Marine Corps the death on the 17th instant, at Washington, D. C., of the Hon, George Bancroft, formerly Secretary of the Navy.

"The long and honored career of Mr. Bancroft, his high character, and the distinction which he achieved, both in public office and literary labor, have made his name one of the most familiar and venerated in American annals.

"His successful administration of the Navy Department from March, 1845, to September, 1846, was marked pre-eminently by the foundation of the Naval Academy, an act which has earned for him the most profound and lasting gratitude of the naval service.

"As a mark of respect to his memory, it is odered.

It was at once supposed that this would make matters all right, and the great scandal which had been caused by the event would be quieted. Clyden was as good as his word. He offered marriage to the lady in honorable fashion. To the extreme amazement of her friends and society in general she refused the offer point-blank. The girl seems to have experienced some strange royalsion of feelperienced some strange revulsion of feel ings toward the man who had wronged her, for she said she did not love Clyden her, for she said she did not love Civden well enough to marry him, and said she preferred to endure the shame which would surely be her destiny were she neither maid, wife nor widow rather than to marry the man who had cruelly be-trayed her love. For some time she would have nothing to do with Ciyden, who wat only expressed their hexpores. would have nothing to do with Clyden, who not only experienced terrible remorse but found that he loved the girl so passionately that he could not live without her. He haunted the neighborhood where she lived only to catch a glimpse of her occasionally. Finally she so far relented as to allow him to visit her. For one year he wosed her ardently, trying to atome for the past. Such devotion was not in vain. It finally won her.

DIED TO SAVE OTHERS. His Death. Dusiver, Cot., Jan. 19.—Two cars in a train on the Cheyenne and Northern Rall road enught fire Saturday afternoon from sparks from the locomotive, and an intervening car prevented the engineer and fire-man from seeing the flames. The passen-gers were driven to the rear coach. A brakeman named Anderson voluniteered to warn the engineer, and at great peril crawled over the burning cars to the front of the train.

In the meantime two children were born to the couple. The husband promised that he would send for his wife and children as soon as he made a home for them in the West. For two years Evans worked in the mines of Colorado. He sent money home to his wife every month. Then he fell sick and was taken to the hospital. That's the last his wife heard of him until some months later, when she received a paper apprising her of her husband's death.

Upon receipt of this news Mrs. Evans removed to Wilkesbarre and kept house for her uncle. She was a good-looking woman for her age, and in the spring of 1889 married John S. Jenkins, and both woman for her age, and in the spring of 1889 married John S. Jenkins, and both lived happily together. On Friday Mrs. Jenkins heard a knock at her front door, and sent her oldest girl to open the door. A well-dressed man stood in the doorway. He said to the little girl: "Is your mamma in? and is she all alone?" The little miss responded: "Yes, mamma is in, and all alone." The gentleman then walked in. Mrs. Jenkins recognized the man at once as her husband.

She fainted, and after she recovered she explained the situation. The husband said it was all his fault; he should have kept up his correspondence with his wife. He had been sick, but recovered; the Evans who died was another man.

In the evening Mr. Jenkins came home, and his surprise was great.

George, who is about 40 years old, came here recently from New Jersey. Miss Townsend was a domestic in a boarding-house, when she attracted the attention of Mr. and Mrs. George, and they adopted her. Mrs. George some time ago went West and it was during her absence, according to the girl's story, that her betrayal was accomplished. George has confessed. George and Erway were arrested Saturday night.

The Doctor is broken down and almost hysterical, but the Minister takes matters coolly, and has sent to friends in New York and Pittsheld, Mass, to go his bail. George has been a zenious church worker, and when the exposure came he was conducting a revival meeting. Doctor Erway is under 40 and has been practicing in Leeds for a year and a half. The physicians say the girl has a chance of recovery.
